

To Whom It May Concern:

October 2009

I approached AgriNetworks Ltd, late in 2005 and discussed the opportunity of running some on-farm field trials during autumn 2006. The trials were designed to support the use of Time Capsule (in sheep) to prevent production losses due to low level and sub-clinical FE. Agri-feeds required the trials to be conducted in a timely manner and within a defined budget. The outcome of these trials would most likely extend over a period of 2 or more seasons.

I found AgriNetworks to be very supportive of our trial objectives, extremely professional and courteous in the manner in which the trials were planned and conducted particularly their attention to detail to ensure we captured all relevant information. AgriNetworks managed the participating farmers to ensure all events occurred in a timely manner, collated the data and provided us with a final report according to the trial schedule.

Agri-feeds have since contracted AgriNetworks services to conduct and manage a molasses feeding trial that started in September 2009 on a sheep station in the King Country. To date all events have occurred in a timely and professional manner – this has become the norm when working with AgriNetworks. The trial is scheduled to be completed early in 2010.

I enjoy working with the AgriNetworks team and have no hesitation in recommending their expertise to the many farmers and rural outlets I work and deal with; I would consider them to be the leaders of the sheep and beef industry.

Agri-feeds look forward to maintaining their good relationship with AgriNetworks over the coming years.
